

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

RENE HARO,

Plaintiff,

V.

MICHAEL J. ASTRUE,
Commissioner of Social Security,

Defendant.

Case No. CV 10-0805-JEM

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER
REVERSING DECISION OF
COMMISSIONER AND REMANDING
FOR FURTHER PROCEEDINGS

PROCEEDINGS

On February 22, 2010, Rene Haro (“Plaintiff” or “Claimant”) filed a Complaint seeking review of the decision by the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration (“Commissioner”) denying his application for disability benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act. On August 23, 2010, the Commissioner filed an Answer to the Complaint. On October 26, 2010, the parties filed a Joint Stipulation (“JS”) setting forth their positions and the issues in dispute.

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), both parties consented to proceed before the undersigned Magistrate Judge. After reviewing the pleadings, transcripts, and administrative record (“AR”), the Court concludes that the Commissioner’s decision should be reversed and

1 remanded for further proceedings in accordance with law and with this Memorandum
2 Opinion and Order.

3 BACKGROUND

4 Plaintiff was born on November 16, 1957, and was 46 years old on his alleged
5 disability onset date of March 11, 2004. (AR 56.) Plaintiff filed an application for Disability
6 Insurance Benefits on March 9, 2006 (AR 56-60), and claims he is disabled due to a hand
7 and shoulder injury. (AR 95.) Plaintiff has not engaged in substantial gainful activity since
8 March 11, 2004. (AR 15, 95.)

9 Plaintiff's claim was denied initially on August 2, 2006 (AR 44-49), and on 10 reconsideration on March 15, 2007. (AR 38-42.) Plaintiff filed a timely request for hearing
11 on May 10, 2007. (AR 36.) Plaintiff appeared without counsel and testified at a hearing held 12 on September 10, 2007, before Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") John C. Tobin. (AR 497-13 534.) The ALJ issued a decision denying benefits on September 26, 2007. (AR 13-23.) On 14 November 9, 2007, Plaintiff filed a timely request for review of the ALJ's decision. (AR 8.)
15 The Appeals council denied review on November 12, 2009. (AR 5-7.) Plaintiff then 16 commenced the present action.

17 DISPUTED ISSUES

18 As reflected in the Joint Stipulation, there are three disputed issues:

- 19 1. Whether the ALJ properly considered the opinion of a treating physician, Dr.
20 Thelma Fernandez;
- 21 2. Whether the ALJ properly considered the opinion of an examining 22 psychologist, Dr. Mark Pierce; and
- 23 3. Whether the ALJ properly considered Plaintiff's testimony and statements.
24 (JS at 4.)

25 STANDARD OF REVIEW

26 Under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), this Court reviews the ALJ's decision to determine whether 27 the ALJ's findings are supported by substantial evidence and free of legal error. Smolen v.
28

1 Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1279 (9th Cir. 1996); see also DeLorme v. Sullivan, 924 F.2d 841, 846
 2 (9th Cir. 1991) (ALJ's disability determination must be supported by substantial evidence and 3 based on the proper legal standards).

4 Substantial evidence means "'more than a mere scintilla,' but less than a
 5 preponderance." Saelee v. Chater, 94 F.3d 520, 521-22 (9th Cir. 1996) (quoting Richardson
 6 v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 401 (1971)). Substantial evidence is "such relevant evidence as a
 7 reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion." Richardson, 402 U.S.
 8 at 401 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

9 This Court must review the record as a whole and consider adverse as well as 10 supporting evidence. Robbins v. Soc. Sec. Admin., 466 F.3d 880, 882 (9th Cir. 2006).
 11 Where evidence is susceptible to more than one rational interpretation, the ALJ's decision 12 must be upheld. Morgan v. Comm'r of the Soc. Sec. Admin., 169 F.3d 595, 599 (9th Cir.
 13 1999). "However, a reviewing court must consider the entire record as a whole and may not 14 affirm simply by isolating a 'specific quantum of supporting evidence.'" Robbins, 466 F.3d at 15 882 (quoting Hammock v. Bowen, 879 F.2d 498, 501 (9th Cir. 1989)); see also Orn v. Astrue, 16 495 F.3d 625, 630 (9th Cir. 2007).

17 THE SEQUENTIAL EVALUATION

18 The Social Security Act defines disability as the "inability to engage in any substantial 19 gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which 20 can be expected to result in death or . . . can be expected to last for a continuous period of 21 not less than 12 months." 42 U.S.C. §§ 423(d) (1)(A), 1382c(a)(3)(A). The Commissioner 22 has established a five-step sequential process to determine whether a claimant is disabled.
 23 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520, 416.920.

24 The first step is to determine whether the claimant is presently engaging in substantial 25 gainful activity. Parra v. Astrue, 481 F.3d 742, 746 (9th Cir. 2007). If the claimant is 26 engaging in substantial gainful activity, disability benefits will be denied. Bowen v. Yuckert,
 27 482 U.S. 137, 140 (1987). Second, the ALJ must determine whether the claimant has a 28

1 severe impairment or combination of impairments. Parra, 481 F.3d at 746. An impairment is 2 not severe if it does not significantly limit the claimant's ability to work. Smolen, 80 F.3d at 3 1290. Third, the ALJ must determine whether the impairment is listed, or equivalent to an 4 impairment listed, in Appendix I of the regulations. Id. If the impediment meets or equals
 5 one of the listed impairments, the claimant is presumptively disabled. Bowen v. Yuckert, 482
 6 U.S. at 141. Fourth, the ALJ must determine whether the impairment prevents the claimant
 7 from doing past relevant work. Pinto v. Massanari, 249 F.3d 840, 844-45 (9th Cir. 2001).
 8 Before making the step four determination, the ALJ first must determine the claimant's
 9 residual functional capacity ("RFC").<sup>1</sup> 20 C.F.R. § 416.920(e). The RFC must account for all
 10 of the claimant's impairments, including those that are not severe. 20 C.F.R. §§ 416.920(e), 11 416.945(a)(2); Social Security Ruling ("SSR") 96-8p. If the claimant cannot perform his or 12 her past relevant work or has no past relevant work, the ALJ proceeds to the fifth step and 13 must determine whether the impairment prevents the claimant from performing any other 14 substantial gainful activity. Moore v. Apfel, 216 F.3d 864, 869 (9th Cir. 2000).

15 The claimant bears the burden of proving steps one through four, consistent with the 16 general rule that at all times the burden is on the claimant to establish his or her entitlement
 17 to benefits. Parra, 481 F.3d at 746. Once this prima facie case is established by the 18 claimant, the burden shifts to the Commissioner to show that the claimant may perform other
 19 gainful activity. Lounsbury v. Barnhart, 468 F.3d 1111, 1114 (9th Cir. 2006). To support a 20 finding that a claimant is not disabled at step five, the Commissioner must provide evidence 21 demonstrating that other work exists in significant numbers in the national economy that the 22 claimant can do, given his or her RFC, age, education, and work experience. 20 C.F.R. §
 23 416.912(g). If the Commissioner cannot meet this burden, then the claimant is disabled and 24 entitled to benefits. Id.

 26 <sup>1</sup>Residual functional capacity ("RFC") is what one "can still do despite [his or her]
 27 limitations" and represents an assessment "based on all the relevant evidence." 20 C.F.R.
 28 §§ 404.1545(a)(1), 416.945(a)(1).

DISCUSSION

A. The ALJ's Decision

In this case, the ALJ determined at step one of the sequential evaluation that Plaintiff has not engaged in substantial gainful activity since March 11, 2004, his alleged disability onset date. (AR 15.)

At step two, the ALJ determined that Plaintiff suffers from the following severe impairments: right shoulder injury, status post-surgery; degenerative joint disease of the left shoulder; degenerative disc disease of the lumbar spine; obesity; and anxiety disorder, not otherwise specified. (AR 15.)

At step three, the ALJ found that Plaintiff does not have an impairment or combination of impairments that meets or medically equals one of the listed impairments. (AR 15.)

The ALJ found that Plaintiff has the RFC to perform "light exertion work with sitting 5-10 minutes every hour, occasional kneel, crouch and crawl, no bilateral overhead reaching, no repetitive forceful pushing/pulling with the right dominant hand, and mild to moderate impairment in attention and concentration." (AR 16.)

At step four, the ALJ determined that Plaintiff could not perform his past relevant work as a numerical control machinist. (AR 22.)

At step five, the ALJ relied on the testimony of a vocational expert in determining that there are jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy that Plaintiff can perform, specifically call out operator, telephone information clerk, and production assembler. (AR 22-23.) The ALJ therefore concluded that Plaintiff is not disabled. (AR 23.)

B. The ALJ Did Not Properly Evaluate Dr. Pierce's Opinion.

Plaintiff contends that the ALJ did not properly evaluate the opinion of an examining psychologist, Dr. Mark Pierce. (JS at 12-15, 17.) The Court agrees.

1. Relevant Law

In evaluating medical opinions, the case law and regulations distinguish among the opinions of three types of physicians: (1) those who treat the claimant (treating physicians);

1 (2) those who examine but do not treat the claimant (examining physicians); and (3) those
2 who neither examine nor treat the claimant (non-examining, or consulting, physicians). See
3 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1527, 416.927; see also Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir. 1995).
4 In general, an ALJ must accord special weight to a treating physician's opinion because a 5 treating physician "is employed to cure and has a greater opportunity to know and observe
6 the patient as an individual." Magallanes v. Bowen, 881 F.2d 747, 751 (9th Cir. 1989)
7 (citation omitted). If a treating source's opinion on the issues of the nature and severity of a
8 claimant's impairments is well-supported by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory
9 diagnostic techniques, and is not inconsistent with other substantial evidence in the case
10 record, the ALJ must give it "controlling weight." 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1527(d)(2), 416.927(d)(2).

11 Where a treating doctor's opinion is not contradicted by another doctor, it may be 12 rejected only for "clear and convincing" reasons. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830. However, if the 13 treating physician's opinion is contradicted by another doctor, such as an examining 14 physician, the ALJ may reject the treating physician's opinion by providing specific, legitimate
15 reasons, supported by substantial evidence in the record. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830-31; see 16 also Orin, 495 F.3d at 632; Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 947, 957 (9th Cir. 2002). Where a 17 treating physician's opinion is contradicted by an examining professional's opinion, the 18 Commissioner may resolve the conflict by relying on the examining physician's opinion if the 19 examining physician's opinion is supported by different, independent clinical findings. See 20 Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1041 (9th Cir. 1995); Orin, 495 F.3d at 632. Similarly, to 21 reject an uncontradicted opinion of an examining physician, an ALJ must provide clear and 22 convincing reasons. Bayliss v. Barnhart, 427 F.3d 1211, 1216 (9th Cir. 2005). If an 23 examining physician's opinion is contradicted by another physician's opinion, an ALJ must 24 provide specific and legitimate reasons to reject it. Id. However, "[t]he opinion of a 25 non-examining physician cannot by itself constitute substantial evidence that justifies the 26 rejection of the opinion of either an examining physician or a treating physician"; such an 27 opinion may serve as substantial evidence only when it is consistent with and supported by 28

1 other independent evidence in the record. Lester, 81 F.3d at 830-31; Morgan, 169 F.3d at 2 600.

3                   2.     Analysis

4           Dr. Pierce performed a psychological evaluation of Plaintiff on February 6, 2007. (AR
5 195-200.) He diagnosed Plaintiff with an anxiety disorder, not otherwise specified, and noted
6 that Plaintiff demonstrated “substantially anxious adjustment with estimated related impacts
7 on deteriorated cognitive impacts per testing” and “labored information processing.” (AR
8 199.) Dr. Pierce opined, among other things, that Plaintiff “retains the cognitive capacity to 9 complete only simple and repetitive vocational skills and to adapt to minimal changes in a
10 work environment. . . . [He] would have mild-to-moderate difficulty working effectively with 11 others . . . [and] can remember and comply with simple one and two part instructions.” (AR
12 200.) A State Agency medical consultant agreed that Plaintiff would have moderate
13 limitations in understanding, remembering, and carrying out detailed instructions; interacting
14 appropriately with the general public; and responding appropriately to changes in the work
15 setting. (AR 181-83.)

16           The ALJ did “not give any weight to the assessments from the psychological 17 consultative examiner and Disability Determination Services psychiatric consultant.” (AR 18 21.) “Giv[ing] [Plaintiff] the benefit of the doubt,” the ALJ found that Plaintiff “has mild to 19 moderate impairment in attention and concentration,” the only mental limitation included in 20 Plaintiff’s RFC. (AR 16, 21.) The Court’s review of the record has not revealed any medical 21 opinions that contradict Dr. Pierce’s opinion; nor did the ALJ or the Commissioner identify 22 any such opinions. (AR 21; JS at 15-17.) The ALJ was therefore required to provide clear 23 and convincing reasons to discount Dr. Pierce’s opinion. See Bayliss, 427 F.3d at 1216.
24 Although the ALJ provided two reasons for rejecting Dr. Pierce’s opinion, they are not clear 25 and convincing.

1 First, the ALJ noted that the “treatment records do not show any subjective mental
 2 complaints and there is no evidence of use of psychiatric medication or mental health
 3 treatment.” (AR 21.) However, the record does contains indications that Plaintiff made
 4 mental health complaints. For example, he wrote that he had difficulties with his memory
 5 and trouble concentrating; and he testified that he had “a lot of trouble” learning how to 6 operate different machines at his last job, and that his “ability to learn, to focus, to 7 concentrate” has changed “[a] lot” over time. (AR 65, 78, 518-19, 521.) In addition, as the 8 Ninth Circuit has recognized, “it is a questionable practice to chastise one with a mental 9 impairment for the exercise of poor judgment in seeking rehabilitation.” Nguyen v. Chater,
 10 100 F.3d 1462, 1465 (9th Cir. 1996) (quoting Blankenship v. Bowen, 874 F.2d 1116, 1124
 11 (6th Cir. 1989)). In any event, Plaintiff’s failure to seek treatment for his mental impairment
 12 does not clearly and convincingly undermine Dr. Pierce’s opinion of his mental limitations.
 13 Permitting such reasoning would effectively render Dr. Pierce’s opinion a nullity even before
 14 the ALJ reviewed it, and would therefore undermine the Administration’s purpose in ordering 15 a psychological evaluation. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1517 (“If your medical sources cannot or 16 will not give us sufficient medical evidence about your impairment for us to determine 17 whether you are disabled or blind, we may ask you to have one or more physical or mental 18 examinations or tests.”).

19 The only other reason the ALJ provided for rejecting Dr. Pierce’s opinion is that 20 Plaintiff’s IQ scores at Dr. Pierce’s examination were questionable because they were 21 inconsistent with Plaintiff’s “normal mental status examination,” Plaintiff is a non-native
 22 speaker of English, and he has “not allege[d] a history of learning disorder or learning
 23 impairment.” (AR 21.) The ALJ did not explain how he concluded Plaintiff had a “normal
 24 mental status examination.” Under the heading “Mental Status Examination,” Dr. Pierce 25 wrote, among other things, that Plaintiff’s “[i]ntellectual functioning is estimated to be in the 26 low average to average range, based on claimant interview;” Plaintiff’s “mood and affect 27 were dysthymic to flat,” with reports of “anxious adjustment with obsessive worrying about his money situation and feeling stressed and ‘desperate;’” and “[a]ttention and concentration are fair during interview, if mildly to greater deficient with attentionally-mediated testing.” (AR 197.) Even if this could be considered a “normal mental status examination,” it does not clearly and convincingly undermine Dr. Pierce’s opinions derived from his overall examination. Similarly, the uncertain impact of Plaintiff’s language abilities and educational history on the validity of the IQ test results does not clearly and convincingly undermine Dr. Pierce’s opinion. Dr. Pierce himself “noted that [Plaintiff] has an ESL limitation per the verbal IQ,” and, before expressing his opinion as to Plaintiff’s functional limitations, stated that “[g]iven adequate effort and rapport, the following diagnostic and prognostic impressions are estimated to be reliable and valid and appear to accurately represent [Plaintiff’s] abilities and functional level at this time.” (AR 198, 199.) Moreover, the ALJ cites no evidence to show that Plaintiff’s linguistic difficulties or educational background undermines Dr. Pierce’s opinion. These factors do not clearly and convincingly discredit Dr. Pierce’s opinion.

The Court cannot conclude that the ALJ’s error in rejecting Dr. Pierce’s opinion was harmless. There is no evidence in the record that Plaintiff could perform jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy if the mental limitations noted by Dr. Pierce are credited. Remand is warranted for the ALJ to reevaluate Dr. Pierce’s opinion.<sup>2</sup>

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security is AFFIRMED and that this action is dismissed with prejudice.

LET JUDGMENT BE ENTERED ACCORDINGLY.

<sup>2</sup>In light of the Court’s remand order, the Court need not adjudicate Plaintiff’s other challenges to the ALJ’s decision. On remand, the ALJ is free to reevaluate the medical evidence, including Dr. Fernandez’s opinion and to reassess the credibility of Plaintiff’s subjective complaints.
